Syllabus for SYP 3750:
Sociology of the Life Course

Description: Sociologists term the different stages of life the “life course.” This class introduces you to the study of these stages from birth to death within social, cultural, and historical contexts from a sociological perspective. Stages can be analyzed as social and historical processes that define individuals and groups differently over time and place, and change over individual lifetimes and histories. We will also consider the impact of the sociological labeling of generational cohorts on social change in the life course.

Required Readings: The following texts can be purchased at the university bookstore, local bookstores or online:
- Jack Kamerman, Death in the Midst of Life, Prentice Hall 1988

Requirements: Successful completion of the following assignments done on time (assignments turned in late will not be accepted; no make-ups):
1. In class oral presentations of the required readings (2 worth 5 points each, 10 points total) NOTE: This assignment requires regular attendance to the course since the assigned reading date may not be the date of presentation!
2. Essay midterm exam (3 questions worth ten points each, 30 points)
3. A qualitative methods research project (30 points)—interviews with transcripts or life history
4. Essay final exam (3 questions worth ten points each, 30 points)
Final points add up to 100 possible (10+30+30+30=100)
NOTE: I do not accept emailed assignments. You must turn in a hard copy in class or in my box in the sociology department on the due date.
